Economic Development Director, City of Ontario

Jennifer McLain Hiramoto returns to the City of Ontario after five years working for the City of Glendale, where she has served as the Acting Assistant Director of Community Development. In that capacity, she was responsible for overseeing the administration function for the Community Development Department, as well as leading the Economic Development Division.

Jennifer joins the team with 11 years in economic development experience, and five years in the private sector as a newspaper reporter. She specializes in developing and implementing collaborative economic development and public relations strategies, and was integral to leading the City of Glendale's COVID-19 business recovery efforts, as well as developing an ecosystem of technology and innovation.

Jennifer earned a Masters of Public Administration from the University of Southern California in 2011, and obtained her Bachelor's Degree from San Jose State University.
